

The Pulitzer Prizes

ARTS

FICTION "Martin Dressler: The Tale of an American Dreamer," by Steven Millhauser.

DRAMA No award.

HISTORY "Original Meanings: Politics and Ideas in the Making of the Constitution," by Jack N. Rakove.

BIOGRAPHY "Angela's Ashes: A Memoir," by Frank McCourt.

GENERAL NONFICTION "Ashes to Ashes: America's Hundred-Year

Cigarette War, the Public Health, and the Unabashed Triumph of Philip Morris," by Richard Kluger.

POETRY "Alive Together: New and Selected Poems," by Lisel Mueller.

MUSIC "Blood on the Fields," by Wynton Marsalis.

JOURNALISM

The Seattle Times and The Times-Picayune of New Orleans each won two Pulitzer Prizes for journalism yesterday.

The Seattle Times was honored for beat reporting on the aerospace industry and for investigative reporting on corruption in a housing program for American Indians. The Times-Picayune won the public service award for a series on the threats to the world's supply of fish and the prize for editorial cartooning.

John F. Burns of The New York Times was awarded his second Pulitzer Prize for international reporting. He was honored this year for his coverage of the harrowing Islamic fundamentalist regime imposed on Afghanistan by the Taliban. He won in 1993 for his reporting from Bosnia.

The staff of The Wall Street Journal won for national reporting for its coverage of the widespread effects of the rapid advances in AIDS research. The staff of Newsday was honored for its spot news coverage of the crash of T.W.A. Flight 800 and its aftermath.

The prize for commentary went to Eileen McNamara of The Boston Globe. The Pulitzer for editorial writing went to Michael G. Gartner of The Daily Tribune in Ames, Iowa, for his editorials on the everyday affairs of his community.

The Philadelphia Inquirer was cited for explanatory journalism for a series on critically ill patients seeking to die with dignity.

Lisa Pollak of The Baltimore Sun won for feature writing for her portrait of a baseball umpire who endured the death of his son while knowing that another son suffered from the same deadly genetic disease.

The complete list, page B7.